

BARBOCK INCIDENT

Action of Pittsburgh Veterans in Armistice Day Parade Regretted.

IS CALLED UNPATRIOTIC

Carry-On Club, Which Started Affair, Says Purpose Is Achieved.

Special Dispatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD.
PITTSBURGH, Nov. 12.—Americanism upheld, "unpatriotic," "very un-American," "unusually and undignified"—these were among those expressed today by witnesses and sympathizers with the victim of the demonstration in the Armistice day parade in which Mayor Babcock was forced to leave the reviewing stand. The current of opinion among officers of high rank who were in Pittsburgh for the celebration seemed to run along the line of the criticism of the parade, which was the line of march was to be regretted.

While their superiors in the service were for the most part condemning the parade, the Carry-On Club, which was the forerunner of the break in the procession, when wounded men refused to go by the reviewing stand, issued a statement in which they declared the demonstration against Mayor Babcock. Without directly mentioning the affair, the statement said:

SWAMPERS AFTER

Contractor Volk Says Chum of Brindell Suggested Labor Feud Theory.

ZARANKO MAKES DENIAL

Hazy Description of Driver of Death Wagon Given by One Witness.

Investigating the theory that the Wall street bomb explosion last September was due to a feud between rival labor organizations—the interest of Robert P. Brindell, head of the Building Trades Council, and William Zaranko's union, Local 92 of Housewreckers—District Attorney Edward Swann said several of his assistants yesterday questioned five men.

These were Zaranko, William P. Ashley of counsel for Zaranko's union, Albert A. Volk, president of the Albert A. Volk Company, which was doing the wrecking on the Stock Exchange Annex at Broad and Wall streets when the bomb went off; Abraham K. Fleisher, secretary of the Volk Company; and Michael J. Scheriff, secretary of the Volk Company.

The only result bearing directly on the explosion was the obtaining from Fleisher of a hazy description of the supposed driver of the bomb wagon. Incidentally there were disclosed instances of Brindell's tyranny in the building trades, and varying opinions as to the loyalty of the Volk company.

Friends of Zaranko's union had intended to bomb the annex job in revenge against Brindell for driving Zaranko's men off the job.

He was about medium height, 5 feet 6 or 8 inches, and weighed around 150 pounds. Fleisher recalled of the driver, whom he had spoken to for a few moments, that he was a driver, with a mustache, and a dark complexion. He was kind of flabby; you know, not slim and not fat. He was foreign looking, dark and might have been a Russian or an Italian. His clothes were not good. He looked like good clothes. He had some kind of a shirt on with a collar of the same material as the body.

"Contractor Tells of Feud."

Mr. Volk, who was first quoted as advancing the labor feud theory, told his inquirers that the theory had been suggested to him by George Atwell, an attorney who had been connected with the Volk company.

SHIPPING CONTRACT

Worth $10 to the Navy. $110 to Shipping Board

UNDER Government operation bought lifeboats from the salvage service of the navy for $10 each and resold them to the United States Shipping Board for $110. The investigation to learn the extent of this "irregularity" is still under way.

down to twenty-four. The department, he said, has been able to save the Government much more than it cost to maintain it.

William G. McAdoo, whose name was mentioned incidentally in the testimony, gave out the following statement last night:

"Some time after I left the Treasury my law firm, McAdoo, Cotton & Franklin, was associated with the regular attorneys of the Virginia Shipbuilding Company as counsel in a controversy between the company and the Shipping Board over a contract for the building of ships. Our relation to the matter was purely professional, entirely within the proprieties, and beyond criticism. The resulting settlement was greatly to the advantage of the Government."

"W. J. Martin was an excellent clerk in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury. After my resignation he left the Treasury and accepted a position with the Virginia Shipbuilding Company. I have nothing to do with it and fail to see any impropriety."
